

Tale of the Empty Pond

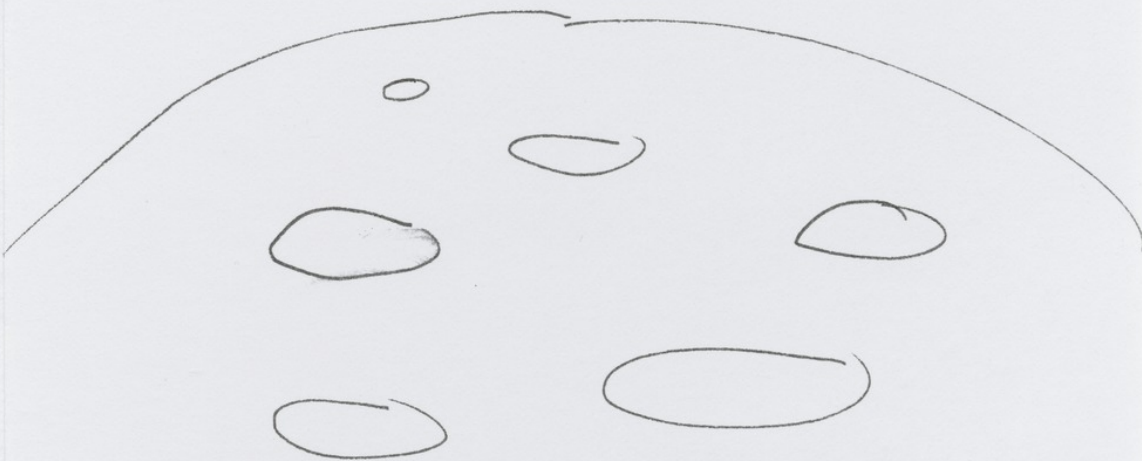

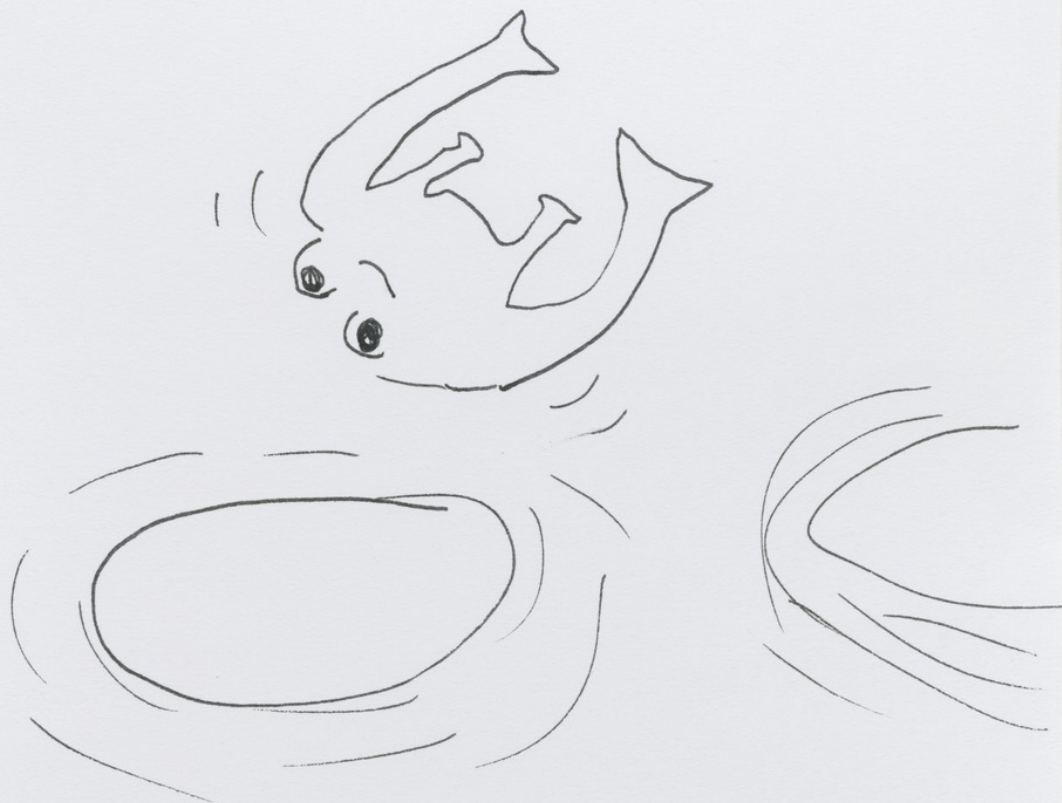

A frog was jumping in the pond.

The pond was made of - guess what? - maple syrup!

What do you think the lily pads were made out of?

The lily pads were made out of pancakes!

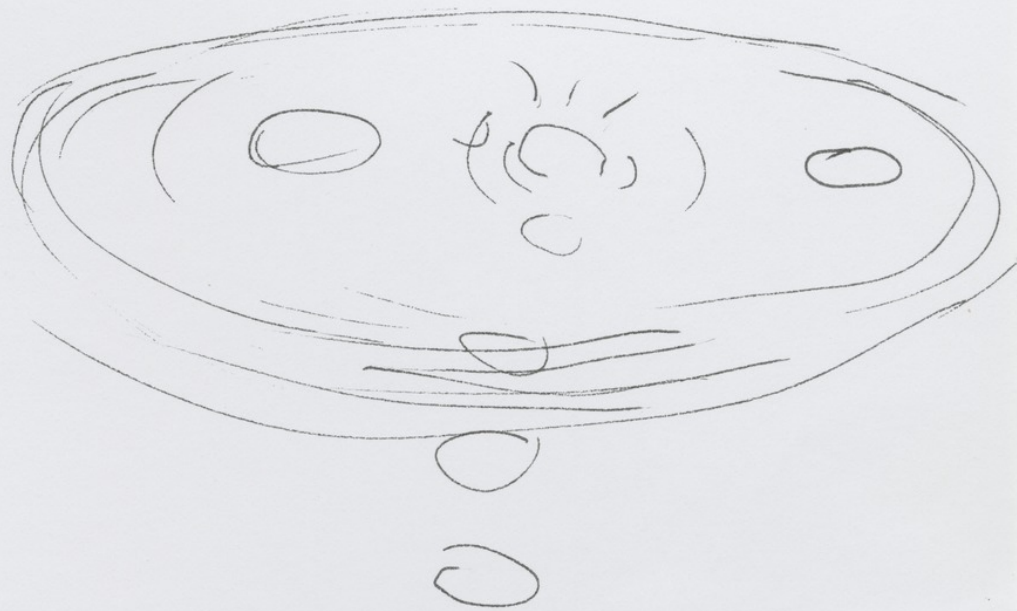

It was Monday and the frog was jumping on the lily pads.

There was a turkey monster that lived at the bottom of the pond.

The turkey monster sounded like this: Gobble gobble gobble.

Little bubbles came up to the top of the pond.

The bubbles scared the frog. He was so scared to see the bubbles.

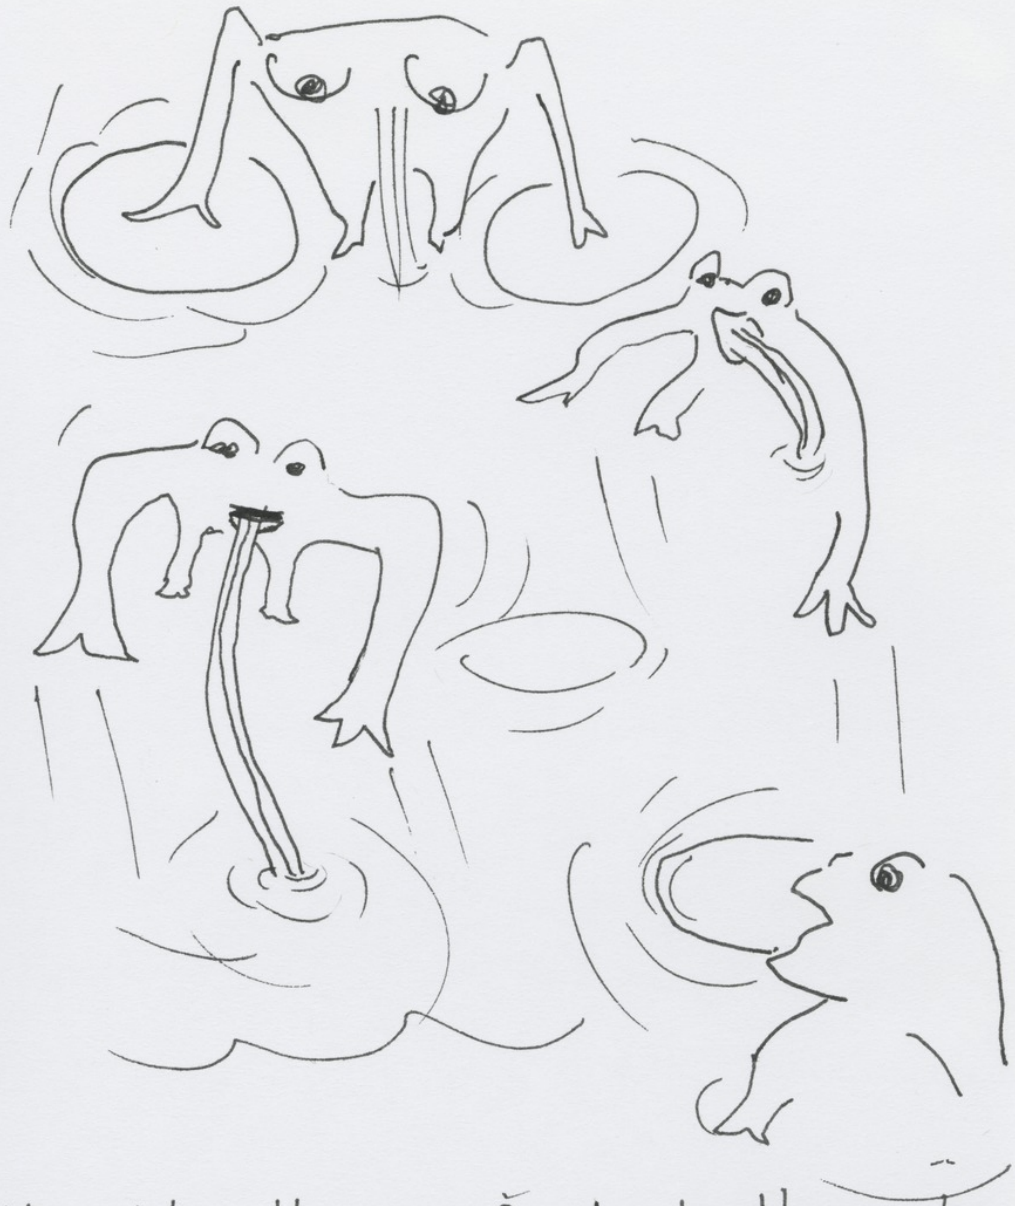

He stuck his tongue out and wondered what was that song from the bottom of the maple syrup pond.

There was a turkey monster who was making the bubbles as the frog tried to taste the maple syrup.

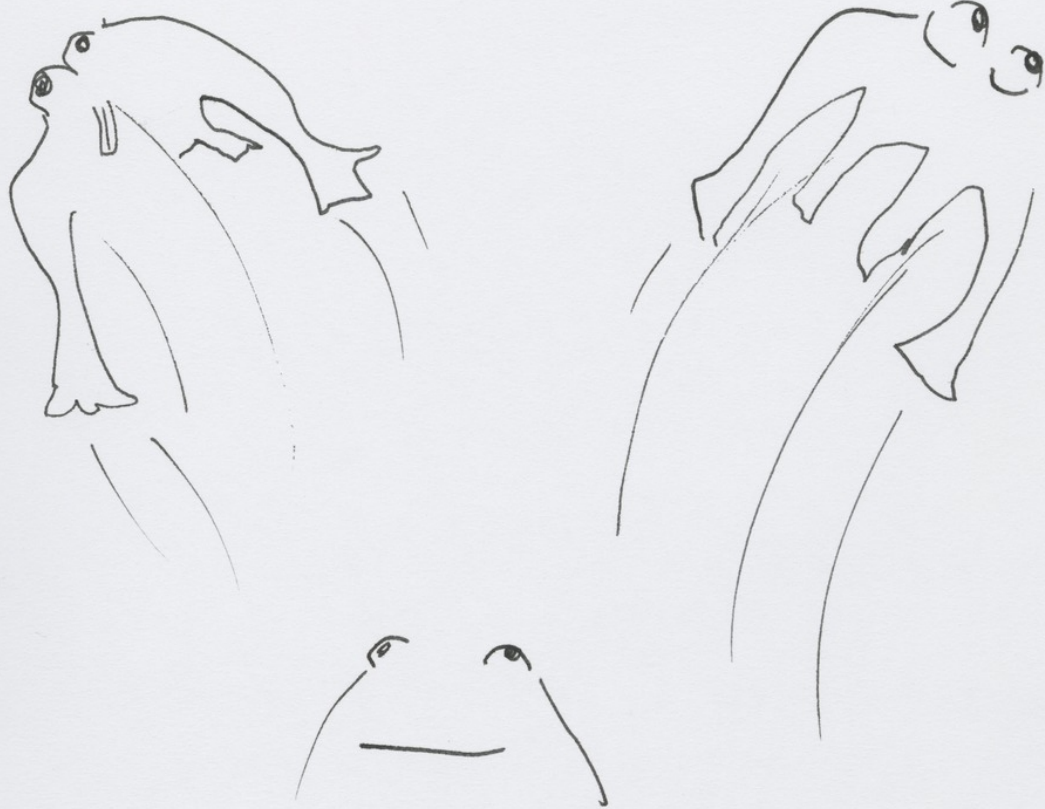

The frog said, "This tastes really good! What should we do?"

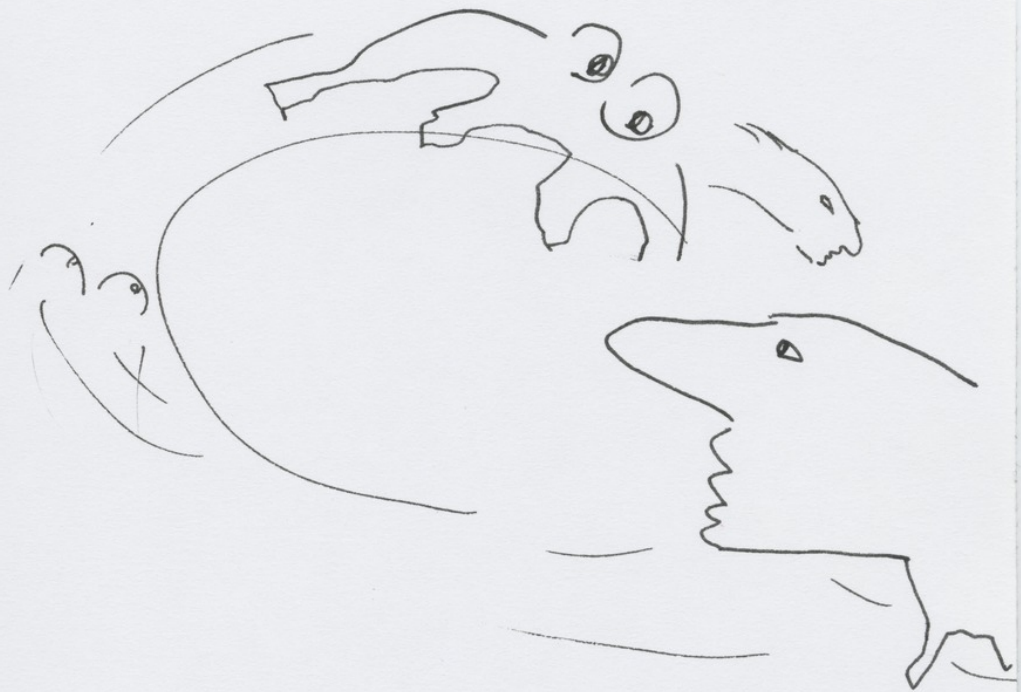

He and his other frog friends ate the maple syrup and pancake tily pads.

They all ate until the pond was empty.

The frog saw his friends jump out of the empty pond to go take a nap.

Then the turkey monster was there and the frog and the turkey monster chased each other around.
